Collaboration tools for researchers

Our idea

PaperHive is a cross-publisher platform that simplifies research communication and introduces new ways of efficient collaboration through in-document discussions in the margin of millions of articles and books.

Passive reading is transformed into a collaborative and productive process.

PaperHive's users are both university students working more efficiently in interactive seminars and lectures, and research groups benefiting from the exchange within their communities.

PaperHive is free for end-users. Academic publishers pay an annual fee for integrating their content with PaperHive.
